Dear FCC,

My name is Phenion Turnipseed and I live in San Francisco, CA.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

To have the freedom to use the Internet when I please is imperative to me! My personal and business life depends on it! I home school my young child and the thought of me having limited access to educate him scares me!

Sincerely,

Phenion Turnipseed
