Dear FCC,

My name is Charlie Fallon and I live in Bellaire, TX.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would keep me from using my custom wireless configuration.

I believe the Internet shouldn't be limited by pricey restrictions, it should be a free place where people can express their ideas and ideals with everyone with no limits.

Sincerely,

Charlie Fallon
