Chairman Wheeler,

I'm writing to urge you to restore broadband competition by fixing the broken market for high-capacity broadband lines. The FCC must address anti-competitive behavior in this market to reach its goal of delivering better, faster, cheaper broadband to all Americans. The future of our information economy depends on it.

This country has preached the free-market gospel for many years, but it seems that that gospel has been corrupted into the idea that "free market" means "letting big companies do whatever they want." It's time to restore competition to our markets by ensuring market access for all players and by keeping monopoly and oligopoly at bay. Our Internet service market is a great place to start because it suffers greatly from oligopoly. Timothy Kynerd
