Dear FCC,

My name is Dustin J-R Hiatt and I live in Muncie, IN.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would limit my freedom to purchase and use any program I see fit

Here in America, the little guy should have the ability to share his thoughts, humor, and innovations with the rest of the world just as easily as anyone else, and to jeopardize this ideal is to jeopardize the American ideal itself by reducing our freedom to share what we want with the world, possibly slowing the progress of humanity itself.

Sincerely,

Dustin J-R Hiatt
