Dear FCC,

My name is M. Tarik Aktas and I live in Stuttgart, CA.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because the Internet should be a free place where you can do whatever you want without having to buy the Internet first.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would keep me from using my custom wireless configuration.

because it would be much easier and better if it would run like a telephone via satellite.

PS: I apologize for some spelling mistakes since I'm from Germany and only speak broken English.

Sincerely,

M. Tarik Aktas
