Dear FCC,

My name is Nina and I live in Elkridge, MD.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

As an avid online consumer, I would buy less stuff through online stores, because with NPRM, I would not feel safe enough to do so. I use third party software to protect my computer, because they are innovative and more effective than my devices' software.

Sincerely,

Nina
