Dear FCC,

My name is John Anderson and I live in Houston , TX.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I want to be able to update my own wireless software?not rely on slow manufacturers shipping updates.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would keep me from using my custom wireless configuration.

I currently use open source software on several wireless devices in my home. This software allows me to keep my personal internet access secure while providing an intuitive method for guests to temporarily use our connection in a way that current manufacturer software doesn't allow.

Sincerely,

John Anderson
