Dear FCC,

My name is Irene and I live in Pittsburg , CA.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

I rely on the internet to get my art out into the world, if you try to put the internet in a box that fits your own standards creativity will decrease. I don't believe anyone wants the internet to be more like television.

Sincerely,

Irene
