Dear FCC,

My name is Amanda perez and I live in Buffalo, NY.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

Youtube, facebook, twitter, and other social media have change the way we interact. I can be friend people whom I have a lot in common, if sites such as this were to be owned, our world would be doll. If weren't for meeting or interacting with such people, I would still be living in 1990S, the Internet is the new cultural diffusion, it's the future, everyone can be treated like equals regardless of how much we make. True equality ...

Sincerely,

Amanda perez
