Dear FCC,

My name is Juanita and I live in Detroit, MI.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

I have children that go to college they rely on using in internet to search and communicate with teachers and others. And us as parents search things that helps us with our children and we also watch videos to help them or sometimes for plan entertainment.

Sincerely,

Juanita
