Dear FCC,

My name is Cindy Buxton and I live in Imperial Beach, CA.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

Either stand for democracy and free trade like you are supposed to or step down and go away. I won't support politics that don't support democracy and threaten to take away our free speech and thought just for more lopsided corporate greed. It is repulsive that anyone could seek to do this. When I hear of these dubious suggestions I immediately suspect at the core is a serious anti-trust violations along with insider trading and racketeering. Anything less raises a serious flag.

Sincerely,

Cindy Buxton
