Dear FCC,

My name is Robert Wagner and I live in Champlin, MN.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I want to be able to update my own wireless software?not rely on slow manufacturers shipping updates.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would keep me from using my custom wireless configuration.

Open structures creates incentives for technological people the ability to tinker and bring better options to not only the open infrastructure world, but to the industry as a whole. Wireless systems are in a need for more advancements and this is one of the fastest cost effective ways to make it happen.

Sincerely,

Robert Wagner
