Dear FCC,

My name is Student Consumer and I live in Covina , CA.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

No one wants to deal with unjust limitations from the FCC (or any other "authority" group) that are guaranteed to hinder the entire field of software development. It's hidden-agenda filled rules and regulations like this one that show the lack of genuine understanding, respect, appreciation and support the American government has for its people. Billions of dollars for prolonged war and destruction and as little as possible for everything else.

Sincerely,

Student Consumer
