Dear FCC,

My name is John Smith and I live in Washington, DC.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because Open Internet

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would make me feel less safe about the wireless networks I use and operate.

Have more to say? Use this space to explain why open wireless devices matter to you. Try to ground this in real-world experience and personal examples.

Sincerely,

John Smith
