Dear FCC,

My name is Devon DeSayles and I live in Staten Island, NY.

The principles of user choice and control are vitally important for a vibrant wireless ecosystem. But as written, the NPRM threatens to undermine these ideals by limiting what users can do with their devices. That's a concern, because I don't want to see community innovations, such as mesh networking, get cut off.

The draft rules could enable device manufacturers to forbid third-party software, which would keep me from using my custom wireless configuration.

The first amendment guarantees the freedom of speech, press, religion, Assembly, and petition. The internet was perhaps the first place where all five of those things could be expressed and indulged in at once. I love it the way it is and have learned so much from the freedom is given me. Please don't take this away it is a major part of what makes this world so great in the modern day.

Sincerely,

Devon DeSayles
