I can think of nothing that government does well other than the opposite of what the American citizens want. The internet should be and remain as it is, a free and open place for discussion, discovery, learning, news, and exchange of ideas. Just as a kitchen knife can be used for evil as well as for good there are some areas that can be and have been monitored by service providers like shutting down terrorist sites and terrorist recruiters. Other than that, I believe the internet, arguably an American Icon of invention like the telephone and light bulb should remain under control of the United States and the citizens.
