Since we do get OANN, we know exactly what it offers, which is up to date news, a few editorial type shows, and entertaining segments of American history, which are educational as well. Best of all, there are no commercials; therefore, no sponsors to please when presenting the news. Charter and Time Warner should not be allowed to choose what news the public receives. It is their public responsibility to respect the citizens enough to give the community all the news, not just what they want them to see. They must add OANN to their cable line-ups.
