I respectfully disagree with approving this merger because it would concentrate the power of public influence to fewer networks while precluding participation by a family owned media business - OANN. Strengthening monopolistic practices may in some cases be deserved, but not in this case because it rewards and perpetuates management of resources to a corporation that is unprofitable and suspect in its business practices. It is not advantageous to the public to give more power to a company, Bright House Network, which has a track record of poor profitability. Besides being unfair by precluding OANN participation, it is neither a sound or viable business option.
