

Gentlemen,

I am retired and subscribe to Time Warner Cable and I have hundreds of channels that I can receive in my home. I choose to watch fewer than 30 channels and about a fourth of those channels are Independent channels like RFD TV, The Weather Channel, The Outdoor Channel, etc. the other channels consist of Discovery, National Geographic, The Learning Channel and the local channels mostly for the local news. Other than that the programming is basically totally useless and I don't even have it programmed into my favorites so I don't even see what is offered and could care less about watching any of the useless trivial material shown on those. When I see new brochures come in the mail advertising new channels being offered it's amazing to me what trivial material they are showing and now they are trying to take Independent channels away that are so important to a lot of those of us who rely on watching these!

I'm currently watching RFD TV and they have so many different kinds of programs I watch on agriculture, livestock, rodeo, country music, comedy, variety and to take away these channels one by one I would seriously consider dropping any cable programming and go strictly with local programming and an outdoor antenna like the "old days"!

Sincerely,

R. Glenn Raleigh
