We watch RFD-TV on Dish Network. It is our most-watched channel and to be honest, I think we would just get rid of the TV if we could not get RFD--it is clean family entertainment, informative, educational, and it embraces our lifestyle. It seems to me that many inner-city residents could learn a great deal about agriculture and rural life if they were to watch RFD. I feel it is extremely important that the public have choices for independent programming on television instead of having all the political/mainstream gibberish rammed down our throats. Please protect independent programmers! Offer them to everyone at an affordable price, not on some expensive tier where the customer has to pay more. Urban based media giants should not be able to block rural content from being distributed--our lifestyle and viewing preferences matter more to those of us "out here" than city values ever will.
