I oppose RM-11760. At present, when a licensed amateur operator dies, his or her license will soon expire and, after a waiting period, his or her call sign is made available for reassignment. But under RM-11760, the FCC would know of the death of a licensee only if someone reports the death. Such reports would require processing and confirmation by the FCC, and this would nullify any savings from the discontinuance of renewals. The net effect of RM-11760 would be the unavailability of many call signs for years.
