I oppose a life-time license.

It would make it impossible to maintain any command and control over the pool of licensed operators.

The only way to properly clear the pool of inactive or SK operators is to allow the license to time out after ten years.

Relying on the friends and relatives of a deceased operator to notify the FCC of an SK is doomed to failure. It would place the burden on other hams to investigate.

For the above reasons, and others listed by my fellow hams, more than justify denying this action.

Thanks.
