I watch RFD-TV on Dish Network. It is critical that we preserve broadcasters like RFD-TV which offer fare that is not available on the typical cookie-cutter channels. So much of cable television is filled with look-alike, boring programming, it is wonderful to run across some of the diverse programming that can be found on RFD-TV and other perhaps less well-known channels.

I live in a city (Tampa) but I love much of the programming on RFD-TV, and believe there are other city-dwellers who feel the same.

I urge the FCC to support diversity on cable by protecting the availability of RFD-TV and similar channel providers.
Thank you.
