Unfortunately, RFD-TV is not available on Time Warner Cable in the San Antonio, TX area. In order to receive Rural Media Group's programming, I subscribe to SiriusXM satellite radio. I grew up in a town on the outskirts of a large city; while my grandparents did have a small flock of chickens and my parents had a vegetable garden, I learned little about agriculture in my first two decades of life. I subscribed to satellite radio in January 2016. In the past two months, I have learned far more about livestock, farming, and their related industries than I ever learned in the aforementioned two decades. RFD-TV facilitates agriculture's best practices and lessons learned, supports small communities, and educates viewers (urban, suburban, and rural); consolidation efforts in the cable industry threaten to cull these valuable services. Programs like Rural America Live, Market Day Report, and Western Sports Roundup are overlooked by larger programmers. Where they fail to deliver, Patrick Gottsch and his group consistently hit the mark or raise the bar. RFD-TV offers informative, family-friendly programs that appeal to viewers across the country. Please continue to foster the voices of independent programmers, which are unfairly being silenced in today's cable industry.
