

I watch RFD TV on Directv.

I am not a farmer. As a child I did spend a bunch of time on a farm. I did read the notice of inquiry.

It seems like the large pay tv providers can dictate what we see. I understand that but to a point. In a time when so much of the television programming is not fit to be called family television. RFDTV is family television.

I think of the large farms in the mid west where the only access to television is pay tv through satellite. RFDTV is geared towards this type of person and to have the pay tv providers tell them what they need to show or not to carry RFDTV is not fair.

RFDTV is geared towards north american farmers. by having the independent programers tell them what they need to broadcast stifles the creative abilities of RFDTV. Please see the text below

Independent programmers and others have asserted that certain MVPDs often demand that carriage agreements include certain contractual provisions, such as most favored nation (MFN) and alternative distribution method (ADM) clauses, that hinder programming competition, innovation, and diversity
