Since Commissioner O'Reilly has yelled about radio programming that he doesn't personally like, I feel that I can say that if AM really wants more listeners, they should play music. Any kind of music, except the format that a local conglomerate had, which subjected me to "Miss American Pie" almost hourly.

The last note is about interference. Our neighborhood had a marijuana growing operation with just 3 Chinese made grow lamps. My house was about 400 feet from the lamps and they knocked out the entire AM band. From 400 feet away! Nothing but noise. This even violates Part 15 rules. Why does the FCC even allow lamps like this to be imported? And if the FCC thinks they don't have jurisdiction over lamp interference due to trade negotiations, why isn't it kicking and screaming until it does?

I'll end with a comment from the local police captain who busted the marijuana operation. When I told him how happy I was that there was no more AM interference, he said: "You still listen to AM? Why? It's all Conservative Talk or news that you don't want to hear."
