

From what I understand in conversations with local stations, smaller stations are only asking for lower power to allow them to better serve their surrounding area. Many small AM stations have a very loyal following, and rely on them for local news, weather and farm information. The FCC continues to stress local service, and this is a way it can be accomplished.