I am against all rule changes...

I do not agree with any of David Summners proposals.

I believe that the reason for the incentive license system is to give Novice and Technician Class License Holders incentive to upgrade their class of license to get more privileges.

If a person is too stupid to pass an exam to upgrade to Technician - a license that can be had in as little as 1 day at any ham cram course and is easily obtainable - even a 5 year old can pass the test, then these people has no business operating digitally on 80 meters.

The same is true with anyone resistant in upgrading their license to General.. Nothing more than a 35 question exam that asks questions about general topics and emissions - which the Technician Class Exam does not cover!

If they don't want to upgrade, tell them to go back to the CB radio...
