Why are we even CONSIDERING further consolidation of major media companies and telecoms.

Free market capitalism only works when there is competition. By removing competitors you are removing the ability for consumers to choose between multiple products from different companies trying to vie for business. When there's no competition there's no reason for a company to improve its service, offer new and better options at better prices.

This is why customer support is terrible for these companies.

This is why prices stagnate if not increase.

This is why our internet is slower and less reliable than other countries.

What you SHOULD be doing is putting motions on the docket to break up the telecoms and media companies.

What you SHOULD be doing protecting consumers.

What you SHOULD be doing is making sure the telecoms are competing with each other and not breaking up markets so that consumers have 1 or if they're lucky 2 options for cable providers.

This is a disgusting and irresponsible on the part of the FCC.

Please do your job.
