I view RFD TV on DIRECTV and recently learned that DIRECTV is going to drop the channel. I protest this arbitrary decision that has happened many times before without regard to the end users. RFD TV gives a service to the end users with important information targeted to rural families. This information is vital to the farming community and plays a service that can't be found anywhere else. In rural communities many times you can only find satellite signal to give a meaningful connection to available rural topics therefore DIRECTV and DISH have an obligation to continue that RFD TV signal to all end users.
