

60001841591.txt

CW remains as useful and as relevant as ever. Those parts of the amateur radio spectrum that are currently limited to the use of CW/Morse Code radio telegraphy to the exclusion of other emission modes should remain so limited.

Allusions to the fact that the morse code requirements have all been eliminated from FCC licensing is not relevant here. CW is unique among modes in its efficiency, its simplicity and its resulting technical value.

Proceeding RM-11769 is without merit.