This proposal is preposterous! The idea that CW (Morse) is similar to digital modes in that it creates "symbols" is simply not true. I copy CW in my head; there are no symbols involved. I do not use a computer to copy CW -- hence no symbols. CW is another language by which MANY hams still communicate, and it will always be extremely useful when conventional infrastructure fails. There must ALWAYS be spectrum devoted to CW operation -- apart from digital/computer modes, and CW operation should be encouraged whenever possible.
