I am an avid participant in the use of our radio spectrum in CW transmissions. I have worked extremely hard to re-acquire the skills needed to be able to use this mode of communication.

I would like to remind the FCC that when all else fails, this is one of the modes of transmission that may still be relied upon to "get the message through".

I do not, therefore, think that this element should be removed from any of our available methods of transmission.
Thank you.
