The marketplace for video content is thriving and highly competitive, offering a wide array of video streaming services, cloud-based video on demand, and apps providing news, cinema and programming. This market is rapidly innovating beyond the traditional set-top box to new applications and devices with more choices than ever.

Past government attempts to govern set-top boxes have been a complete failure. Yet another failed attempt at heavy-handed government regulation will only put the brakes on innovation and benefit companies with political sway rather than companies that provide what Americans want. We don't need the FCC to repair something what isn't broken -- I urge you to reject the proposed rule.
