The exchange for video content is thriving and incredibly competitive, offering a wide array of video streaming services, cloud-based video on demand, and apps providing news, cinema and programming. This market is swiftly innovating beyond the traditional set-top box to new applications and devices with more choices than ever.

Past FCC attempts to control set-top boxes have been a complete failure. Yet another failed attempt at heavy-handed government regulation will only put the brakes on innovation and benefit companies with political influence rather than companies that provide what viewers want. We don't need the FCC to attempt to fix what isn't broken -- I urge you to reject the proposed rule.
