It is disturbing to have one's peace of mind and quiet solitude to be rudely interrupted by a call from an electronic device which wants to reduce your credit card debt, when that is NOT an issue for you. And, to have this call be repeated several times a day, many times a week, and God knows what that will add up to in the period of a month or a year. It is enough for someone my age to violently disconnect the phone from the wall. But that's not the solution, eliminating Robocalls completely would satisfy my need for privacy and quiet.
