The concept that debt collection robocalls can be made to anyone other than the debtor is insane. Only a totally corrupt political system could conceive that. This is just another version of the debtor prison concept.

I note that the public is not being given the phone numbers of the robocallers so we can serve them as they would serve us.

I note that there is no limit to the number on calls per day, per week, per month - and no limits on time of day.

I note there is no proposal to force the robocallers to inform their victims with clear and readably available guidelines.

I note there is no mention of a citizens' right to stop receiving robocalls.

I note that robocallers can ruthlessly invade our homes - for that is what robocalls amount to.

I note that there is no recourse if the robocallers have a wrong or out-of-date phone number, or a incorrect person, or are calling for a debt that has been paid off. As inept as government and as venal as big business has proven to be, this rule-proposal is - in my opinion - criminal.

If there is cynicism concerning government in this country, the concept that the government has been bought out, then this is a prime example of why Americans SHOULD be cynical.
