I have NO debt, but my cell phone is the target of one to three unsolicited calls every day. A large percentage are hang up calls from all over the US. The rest, recorded messages from illegal telemarketers I have no use for, nor would I dream of responding to. I block each number as it comes in. Why can't we have a rule that automatically disables a phone number if 50 or 100 people block it? My landline has been rendered useless; I don't answer and am probably going to disable the ring. I only keep it since it's bundled. Calls are beginning to come in overnight. When will the harrassment stop?
