

60002112610.txt

I am a visually impaired woman who watches far more TV than when I could read text in books, magazines, newspapers, etc. So often these days, a TV show, even a newscast, will show a picture of a phone screen displaying a text message or app. These displays are invisible to me in real life, let alone on a television screen. Can the visual description program please include a reading of on-screen messages for those like me? Thank you.