Notice of ex parte presentation: In the Matter of Expanding Consumers' Video Navigation Choices, MB Docket No. 16-42; Commercial Availability of Navigation Devices, CS Docket No. 97-80

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On June 15, 2016, Jared Sher of 21st Century Fox, Inc, Kimberly Hulseley of Scripps Networks Interactive, Kyle Dixon of Time Warner Inc., Keith Murphy of Viacom Inc., Susan Fox of The Walt Disney Company and ESPN, Inc., and the undersigned (collectively, "the Content Companies") met with Jessica Almond of the Chairman's Office, Scott Jordan, the Commission's Chief Technology Officer, and John Williams of the Office of General Counsel regarding the above-referenced proceeding.

In the meeting, the Content Companies reiterated principles contained in their comments and reply comments, as well as those in the comments of the National Association of Broadcasters. In sum, we reiterated that we are open to the Commission's goals of consumer choice, but need assurances that our valuable content will not be disturbed, modified, altered or added to in any way that deviates from the contractual licensing provisions and restrictions we reach with MVPDs.

Sincerely,
