

I believe the proposal to mandate the tracking of cell location at for all cellular phone calls is a clear and unwarranted invasion of privacy. I think the FCC should strongly oppose any such universal, continuous surveillance. Please consider the rights of the individuals and do not endorse something which provides a very real and very large potential for abuse as a readily available tracking device registering the movements of the millions of Americans who use cell phones daily.