

"What thing did government ever find in its power, and not eventually try?" -- Vin Suprynowicz

Just because they can, government wants to be able to tap any phone, track every citizen's movements via her cell phone. Somewhere this has got to stop. The FBI is not my mother, it is not my father, it is not my Big Brother.

The potential for abuse simply boggles the mind. And then the FBI and every other government agency wonders why the American are coming to fear their government. It's quite simple; we don't trust you to do the right thing, as this further example of government snoopervision demonstrates.

I absolutely, positively oppose this proposal. Period. Not that it'll do any good.