

I agree with CDT 100%. While I am not a cellphone user (only a user of corded and cordless phones at home), I still see a huge potential for abuse and invasion of privacy here. There is no reason under the law to spy on ordinary and innocent citizens not suspected of any crime. It is unconstitutional and cannot be tolerated. Please do not consider rewriting the law or passing any constitutional amendments to do so. If somebody is suspected of a crime, there are sufficient safeguards and requirements already built into the wiretapping laws we have now. Please do not move us any closer to the 1984 and "Big Brother" envisioned by George Orwell in his novel, "1984". I and many others are counting on you, Congress, the FBI and the President to do the right thing when it comes to protecting our privacy. If the changes you are proposing are passed, I am sure that increased surveillance of home corded and cordless phones will not be far behind. Please don't disappoint me and my fellow citizens. Our rights have already been eroded enough. Let's keep the United States a democracy, a good place to live and the best country in the World, like it has been for many years. Thank you for inviting public comment on this vitally important issue.
