Jeffrey A. O'Rourke (jorourke@cetlink.net) writes:

Dear FCC,

I purchased a satellite this year. I did this because the cost is lower than cable. However, I do not receive any network stations, even my local channels. I use rabbit ears for this and don't get the best picture.

I understand everyone is trying to get something out of this and posturing for power. What I don't understand is why the government even cares how I get my TV. I WANT LOCAL TV CHANNELS. I don't think it should be against the law for my satellite provider to carry them.

Please, rectify this ridiculous situation.
