

In some cases the local networks I receive here offer decent or even excellent picture quality and/or stereo sound... but they can't offer me a West Coast feed. (There are times where I would like to watch a program on more than one network but because they are on at the same time.... I'm limited to "pick and choose" or VCR wrangling to see the other program later. With East and West Coast feeds I can see one program I want at 8 EST and watch the other program on the other network's West coast affiliate at 11 PST!!!! This is a very nice feature I'm about to lose because of this outdated law originally aimed at ANALOG satellites.. which had no better reception than local broadcast stations.... With over 400 lines of digital resolution now, broadcast TV can't compare and shouldn't even try....
