

Dear FCC Members,

I am concerned about losing access to television Networks via 18 Inch Satellite. Why is it unlawful to receive network television stations by satellite if one chooses to pay for the network feeds? I thought this was America and that we have freedom of choice. Why don't we have freedom of choice as to what network television station that we want to watch? If a satellite national feed for CBS is available and also a local CBS feed is available, why not let the consumer choose what he/she wants to watch. After all, they are both CBS Co. who gets the revenue. I ask that you allow the consumer to choose.
