

It's wrong. We have a right to keep our privacy, and the FCC can't go into it. They already regulate too much stuff in the electronics world (my internet connection for example.) They don't need to know where I am all the time. It's almost like the Pentium 3 logging where you go on the internet.