

Methods for ETC CLECs to Identify Available USF Support per Line

The CALLS Interstate Access USF Support process proposes that the amount of USF support per line per COSA is determined by the UNE zone in which the line is provisioned. A UNE zone is generally a geographic area served by an ILEC wire center,¹ or group of ILEC central offices. ILEC wire center (WCs) are uniquely identified by a Common Language Location Identifier (CLLI) code and, currently, every NPA-NXX code is assigned to a specific WC CLLI code.² The CALLS Interstate Access USF Support process requires the ILECs to provide the Fund Administrator with a listing of WC CLLI codes by zone which will be available to all carriers (Form 1).

Eligible Telecommunications Carrier (ETC) CLECs need to be able to determine the ILEC's WC CLLI code (or UNE zone) that would have provided dial tone to their customer's in order to determine their USF support. Facilities based CLECs³ may provide service exclusively using UNEs, or exclusively on their own facilities or in a combination of both. In most cases, CLECs will be replacing existing ILEC service to a customer location, since almost 95% of households have telephone service. However, in some cases, such as newly constructed housing, CLECs may be the original provider of service to the customer's location.

The ETC CLECs may use the following process to determine the UNE zone in which its customers are located.

1.) The CLECs may view maps, provided by the ILECs, produced using Geographic Information Systems (GIS),⁴ that show the UNE zones in each state, COSA or some other geographic area such as a LATA or MSA. In most cases, this will enable CLECs to identify the UNE zone in which their customer's are located in most cases. (See attachment A)

² The FCC recently adopted rules to assign telephone numbers to CO CLLI codes based on blocks of a 1,000 numbers rather than by NPA-NXX. At the time these rules become effective, the UNE zone identification process may be easily modified since each block of a 1,000 numbers will still be uniquely identified with a specific CO CLLI code. Therefore, the CO CLLI code may be identified by using the NPA-NXX-X.

³ This paper addresses USF per line support for traditional wireline CLECs and fixed wireless CLECs. The paper currently does not address determining the amount of USF per line support for other ETC wireless carriers, such as mobile wireless carriers.

⁴ These are commercially available software packages, such as MapInfo and Arcview.

2.) CLECs may use existing systems and databases to determine the UNE zones in which their customer's are located. In order to cross reference the customer location to a UNE zone, the CLEC needs to determine the ILEC WC that provides, or would provide service to the customer's location. This could be accomplished as follows:

A.) Service provided using UNEs (exclusively or in combination with CLEC facilities).

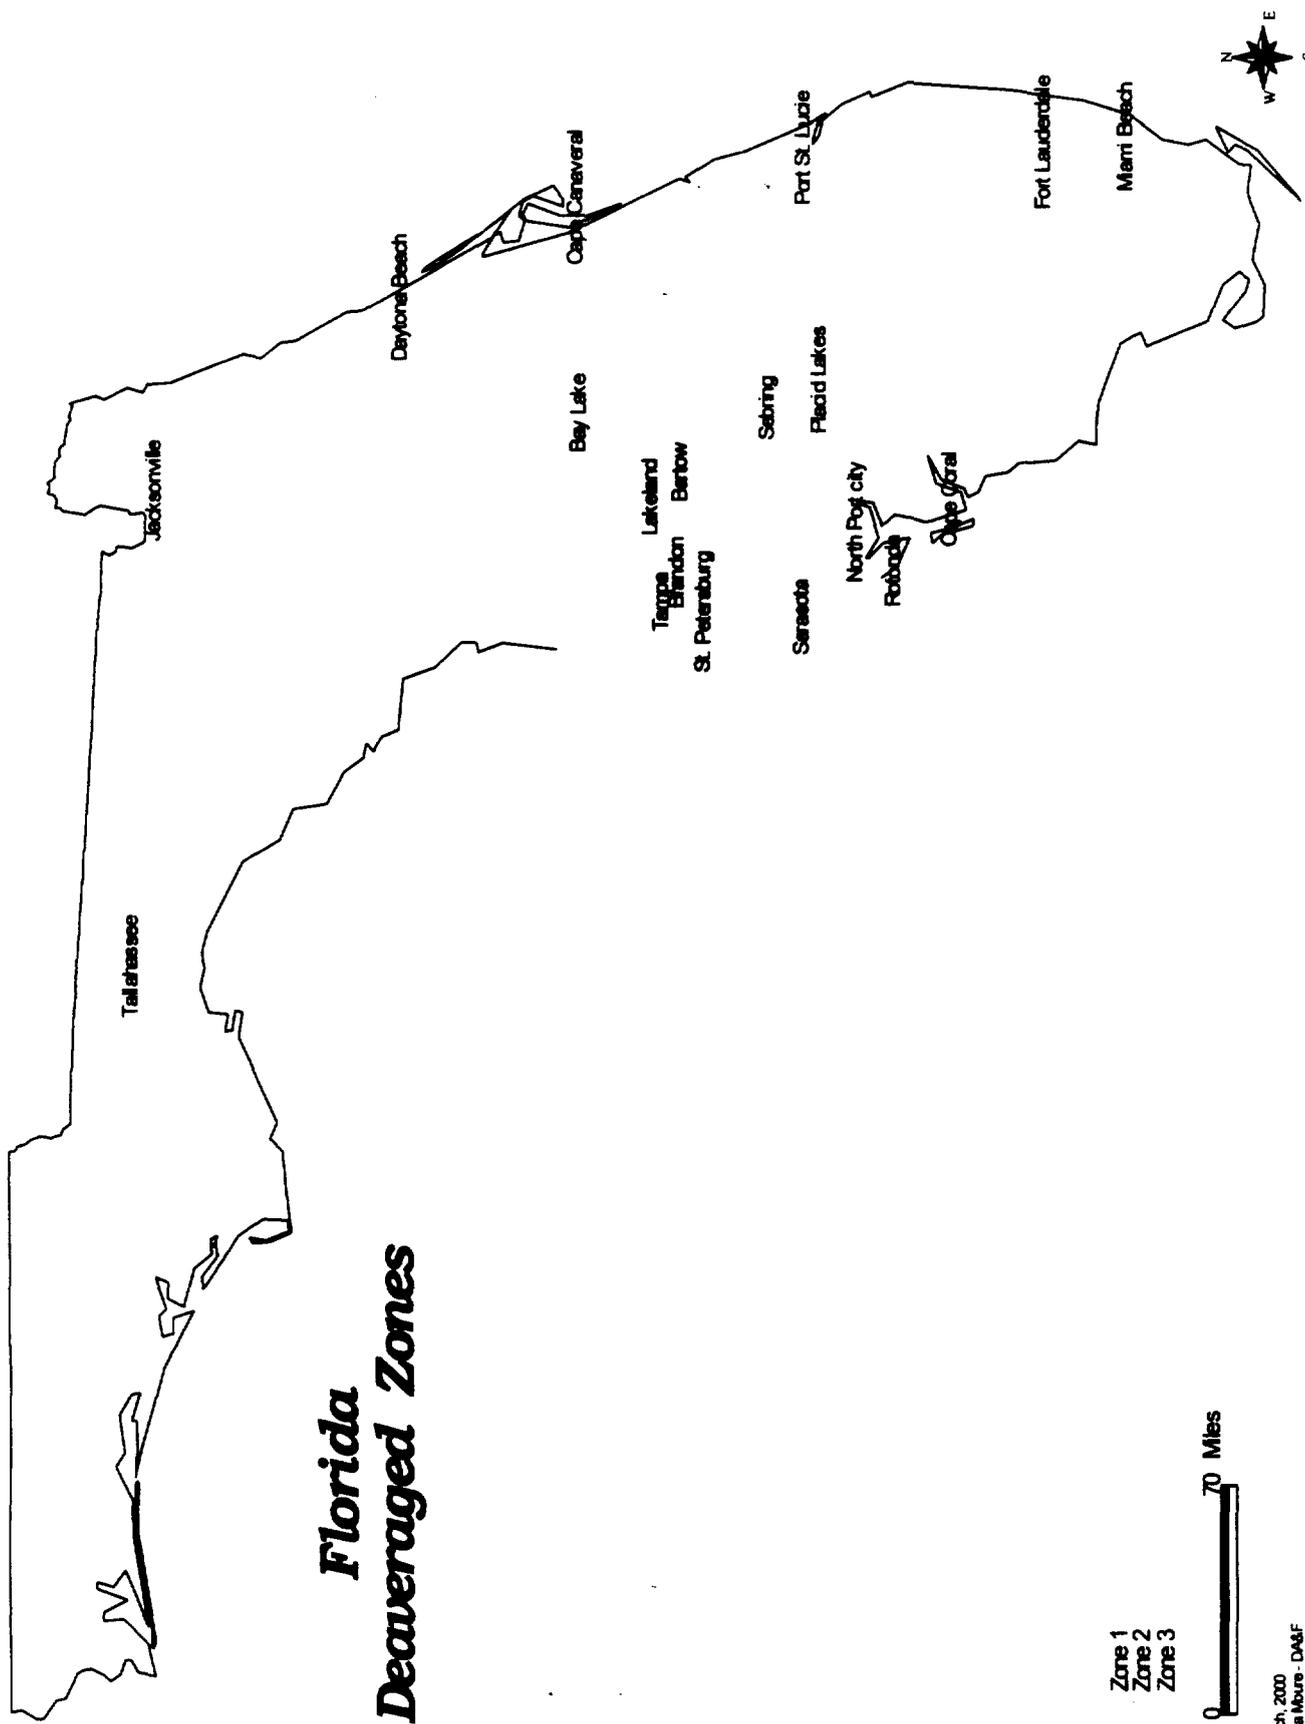

- i) In the normal provisioning process, the ILEC will provide the CLEC with the information required to determine the WC CLLI code.

B.) Service provided exclusively with CLEC facilities.

- i) Customer location already served by ILEC.
 - (1) Pre service verification – through an OSS query of the current TN the CLEC will be able to determine the WC CLLI code that provides dial tone to that customer's location.
 - (2) Database search – use current TN to search a database that cross references NPA-NXX to WC CLLI (e.g., the LERG, DSL Reports web page, Telcordia CLLI database, etc.) to determine the ILEC WC CLLI code. (See attachment B)
- ii) Customer location is not currently served by the ILEC (new construction). – Several directory services are available on the Internet that enable users to search for all end users on a street or for TNs that serve a specific address. (See attachment C)
 - (1) Access Internet reverse directory and search for TNs by street name. Then cross-reference the identified nearby TNs by NPA-NXX to WC CLLI code.
 - (2) Access Internet reverse directory service and search for a TN by a nearby address. Then cross-reference the NPA-NXX to WC CLLI code.

Internet Addresses

- 1.) www.dslreports.com - provides cross reference of NPA-NXX to CO
 CLLI
- 2.) www.teldir.com - provides listing of directory services on the Internet
- 3.) www.anywho.com - provides reverse directory address lookup of TNs
- 4.) www.infospace.com - provides reverse directory address lookup of TNs
- 5.) www.telcordia.com - provider of CO CLLI code tables

ABSTRACT: Those of you who need to identify switches for NPA/NXX requests or establish points of interface (POI) with other carriers should know about CLLI Codes Online, the newest addition to the Telcordia Information SuperStore!

This new service has been created specifically for non-licensees (i.e., those customers whose growing businesses do not yet require the greater value offered by our basic- or support-level licenses).

With CLLI Codes Online, placing an order is easier than ever. To start the process, simply add the item to your shopping basket, provide us with basic customer and code-assignment information for one or more codes, accept the online agreement terms, and pay by credit card.

We anticipate a turn-around time of three business days following receipt of your request. Should our Customer Service Center need additional information to expedite this process, they will contact you. And when we're all done, the code assignment will be e-mailed to you.

The CLLI code set is absolutely essential to the quick and precise exchange of information that enables you to interconnect with customers and carriers.

This tool for identifying and describing network sites, network-support sites, equipment locations and related job functions:

- Allows you to manage your network more effectively than ever by clearly identifying the general category and function of each and every location
- Makes it easier for you to identify the exact location of a network problem, take prompt action, minimize downtime and increase customer satisfaction
- Helps you stay abreast of next-generation technologies that anticipate customer demands for increasingly diverse services.
