A city man who stabbed his wife and mother-in-law to death Friday morning had been attacked before he began his rampage, Berks County Coroner William R. Fatora said after the autopsy on Noel A. Pahuamba was completed.

The autopsy uncovered between 20 and 40 stab wounds in Pahuamba's forehead, throat, chest and stomach, and back, including several he could not have inflicted on himself, according to Fatora. "Only one weapon was found," said Fatora, "and some of the back wounds appear to be inflicted by someone else from behind the victim. It is apparent there are several wounds he could not have inflicted himself."

Witnesses then say he killed his wife after she tried to stop him, also cutting the wrist of his 3-year-old son, Noel Jr., and striking his sister-in-law, Imelda Flores-Sebastian, 22. Pahuamba apparently ended his bloody spree after Flores-Sebastian made an emotional plea as he began to advance on her, according to police. "Don't kill me," his sister-in-law reportedly pleaded. "There will be no one left to take care of the kids."

The wounds from the knife's 5-inch blade would have caused him great pain, but would not have incapacitated him, and the chest wounds which killed him were likely to have been self-inflicted, Fatora said. Autopsies on Robles and Flores were scheduled for late Friday and early Saturday, Fatora said. "Since his (back) wounds were not self-inflicted," said Fatora, "and we're not saying they were inflicted somewhere else, we know there was a confrontation and we are trying to determine how they were inflicted."

Crubs Reading Aerofest '92

The Aerofest, revived by the authority in 1985 after a five-year hiatus, annually attracts some of the top aerial acts in North America. Prior to 1985, it was sponsored each year by the former Suburban Airlines and was targeted toward those in the industry.

Last year, the U.S. Navy Blue Angels, the crack-jet squadron of six F/A-18 Hornets, were the featured performers.

Season's skimpy snowfall is 12 inches below normal

This amount of snow that has fallen in Berks County so far this season is 12 inches below normal for this time of year, according to the National Weather Service. The previous latest date was Jan. 13, three days earlier. Last year, 12.2 inches had been dumped on Berks by Jan. 18, records show. Most of that came on Dec. 27 and 28, when 8.8 inches were recorded.

Snowfall for the 1980-81 season was 14.8 inches. 15.1 inches below normal. The record for the least amount of snow was set in 1972-73, when 7 inches were recorded. "The way things are going, that old record could be broken," said Karl M. Loeper, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service station at Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton Airport. "But winter isn't over. We could have some good snowfall in February and March."

Loeper recalled as an example the "Blizzard of 1983," when 26 inches smothered the county on Feb. 11. Phina Bodock, director of the Berks Agriculture Stabilization & Conservation Service, said she is concerned about the lack of snow. "If we don't have a significant amount of snowfall this winter," she began, "and a significant amount of rainfall in the spring, farmers could be in trouble."

14 arrested in drug roundup

By Steven D. Sacchetti
Eagle/Press
Fourteen reputed drug dealers were arrested Friday as city, county and state narcotics agents continued a roundup that capped a five-month probe into heroin and cocaine sales in the Oakbrook Homes area.
Three members of the ring were already in prison, and police said they were pursuing leads on 24 more individuals.
Three more suspects were arrested for drug possession after police served search warrants at two city residences, including 941 Liggett Ave., which Lt. Francis F. Drexler of the city vice squad characterized as a family-run heroin operation and the headquarters for drug distribution in Oakbrook.

Charged suspects listed. See Page B2

Investigators searching the Liggett Street house seized 61 bags of heroin with a street value of $1,300, seven bags of cocaine valued at $700, and about $2,000 in cash, according to Drexler.
At the Fourth Street building, authorities seized 10 bags of heroin and $1,408 in cash in a second-floor apartment, police said. The drugs had an estimated street value of $150, investigators said.
Miguel Madera, a first-floor tenant had $485 when he was arrested, they said.
According to Drexler, the Liggett Avenue operation has been functioning about three years, and has been the site of previous drug searches and arrests by vice squad members.
"The family would primarily provide heroin to other dealers for distribution out on the street," the lieutenant said.

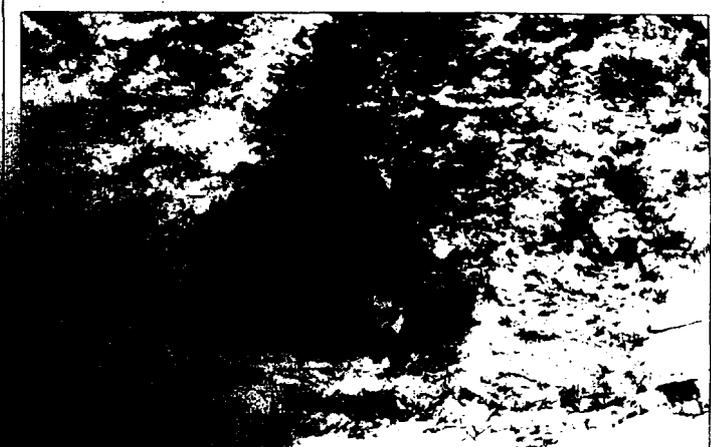

But sometimes they also went out and made deliveries themselves.
Drexler said most of the 60 drug buys during the probe, which began in August, were made by city vice-squad members and troopers from the Region 11 Strike Force based in Reading.
Purchases ranged from $20 to $200 and all transactions were completed in the city, he said. Between $6,000 and $10,000 in funds were used.
Agents from the Berks County Drug Task Force and state Attorney General Ernie A. Preater's Bureau of Narcotics Investigation assisted.
Suspects were arraigned in the Redwood Avenue office of District Justice Felix V. Stucherson. Bail for suspects was set at $30,000 per count for a minimum of $100,000.

Message is clear — to some

Apparently the incumbent state lawmakers are getting a message that the sitting members of Congress aren't.

That message is that the voters are angry and they are out for the hides of anyone currently in power.
Nearly 20 state lawmakers including two long-time legislators, Rep. James J. Gidley and Rep. John S. Davies — already have announced they will not seek re-election this year.

And, according to Williams, the general election is a low-key affair for the voters. The election is open to anyone who wants to run for office.

Miller said the commissioners are faced with a $127.5 million budget. "The problem is, where are we going to cut..."

Haggerty going fishing for some big ones

By William Casey
Eagle/Press
Is there a Neilman-Marcus in Reading's future?
Now almost a Sixth-Fifth Avenue, a Lord & Taylor or maybe a Marshall Field?
Mayor Warner H. Haggerty Jr. said Friday he is trying to capitalize on recent marketing trends and the city's outlet market reputation to entice those and other major retailers to open their own outlets here.
The first invitation to consider Reading went out with the old year to R.H. Macy & Co., the New York owner of Macy's department stores. In a Dec. 31 letter and marketing materials showing various aspects of Reading.
Since then, based on internal discussions with city development staff, the field has been broadened to include other retailers.
Haggerty said the idea of trying to attract department store chains to open outlets here was first considered about four years ago during attempts to redevelop the closed Pomeroy store building at Sixth and Penn streets.
Although those attempts floundered, he said, some retail chains now are looking to open outlet locations in secondary market areas, in order to keep main store inventories more current.
As seasons and appetites change, goods would be removed from the shelves of the flagship stores and discounted for sale at the outlets.
"One thing this city has going for it in a very real way is its reputation as the outlet capital of the world," Haggerty said.
The mayor said he hopes to see Reading's ability to compete sharpened even further in the near future, when discussions begin on a more aggressive tax abatement program for new developments.
The program would grant a gradually declining property tax forgiveness to developments over a 10-year period.
In the first year, a development would be forgiven 100 percent of the tax due on the improvements. The abatement would decrease 10 percent each year, so that after the 10th year, the full tax would be due.

Board weighs changes

By Nora Coyne
Eagle/Press

Every member of the Womissing School Board will consider trimming the estimated cost of the proposed $16.8 million expansion and renovation of the junior-senior high school in light of strong protests by about 200 district residents.

But the seven veteran board members said they are committed to the project. Some said they do not believe that the project can be cut back.

The board will meet to review the residents' comments Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the junior-senior high school, but no formal action may be taken for 30 days after the hearing. During that time, written comments may be submitted to the board secretary, Rosemary Kramer.

At a hearing on the plan Wednesday night, only about 20 of about 300 residents in attendance raised their hands in support of it. The audience repeatedly applauded resoundingly when the plan was called a "Tax Mahal coming in the middle of a deep recession."

Richard A. Ziemer, president of the residents council of the Highlands at Womissing, said the project should be scaled back by 10 to 15 percent. Henry P. Conrad, a West Reading councilman, suggested spreading the cost over 10 years.

New board members Robert A. Ruppel and Thomas S. Walter said they were not ready to decide on the project.
Several residents also were applauded when they accused Anthony T. LaPara, board president, of stonewalling them at the hearing.

"We'll try to take a look at the project to make sure that there is no fluff in it that could mean a reduction," said LaPara. "That's what we've been trying to do all along."

Board member Barbara A. Cafarello said that she has been trying all along to cut costs but has not met with much success.

Now her hope is to have bid specifications written so that the project would come at least $1 million below the estimated cost. She said the board should have architects who are not involved in the project check the specifications for cost effectiveness.

Cafarello believes the board will bid many items as alternatives so they can be rejected if they are too costly.
"We'll try to take a look at the project to make sure that there is no fluff in it that could mean a reduction," said LaPara. "That's what we've been trying to do all along."

Board member Ruth K. Walker promised that the final project will be fair to everyone.
"We have to review the plans with the architect (Ray Group of Lancaster) to see whether there is any place we can cut anything," said Randall E. Hinesy, board member. "Personally, I don't think there is any place we can."

Board member James M. Dockey said the board has to consider... ADAMS EXHIBIT 2... 1991-1992

Shopping survey shows some items cheaper in suburbs

Film opens to violence in 8 states

Violence broke out at theaters in at least eight states including Pennsylvania, after the premiere of the urban film drama "Juice." One teen-ager was killed and four other people were wounded.

An 18-year-old Philadelphia man was paralyzed from the chest down after he was shot early Saturday coming out of a movie theater in Cheltenham Township, Montgomery County, a hospital spokeswoman said. Police said they had no suspects and didn't know what the fight was about.

Cheltenham police officer Mark Bates said the shooting occurred shortly before 12:30 a.m. outside the Cheltenham Theatre.

The victim, Marcus Harrington, II, suffered a gunshot wound to the neck.

Police said they had no suspects and didn't know the reason for the shooting.

Outside another theater in downtown Philadelphia Friday night, a man was arrested after pulling a loaded .357 Magnum and trying to improve his place in line to see the movie, police said. The man, whose name was not released, was arrested on a weapon charge.

Although fights Friday night involved theatergoers, police said much of it was random violence that could have occurred anywhere.

Chicago police Detective Roland Paulinsky said the death of a 16-year-old girl outside a theater showing "Juice" resulted from a street altercation with a rival street gang.

"This was not a result of that movie," he said.

Many theater owners added extra security to forestall the kind of violence that plagued "Boyz n' the Hood" and "New Jack City." Two other films about inner-city life. One person was killed in dis-

Local screening without incident

"Juice" opened Friday night at the Fox Plaza theater on Route 222 in Muhlenberg Township and has not been the scene of any violence despite several incidents which have occurred across the country, according to Dane York, manager of the Plaza.

"We have two security guards on hand for the movie," said York, "which is more than usual. They're extra help, just in case, but there's been no problems. Everything is running smoothly."

Muhlenberg Township police reported that one teenager who danced in the aisles and obstructed other patrons' view of the movie was asked to leave by the security guards around 11:00 p.m. and did so.

turbances when each of those films opened last year.

Paramount Pictures, which distributed "Juice," offered to pay for extra security for any theater that wanted it.

"Juice" tells of four black Harlem youths, including one who gets involved in a robbery that ends in murder. The movie was directed and co-written by filmmaker Ernest Dickerson, who has worked as Spike Lee's cinematographer.

Incidents also were reported in New York City, Boston, Chicago, Lansing, Mich., Anchorage, Alaska, North Little Rock, Ark., and Omaha, Neb.

Burns, contaminates man

Two other members of the work crew, who were not identified by plant officials, were uninjured and sustained no contamination. All were clad in protective suits at the time of the incident, he said.

Kaplan said the event was declared over by 10:00 a.m.

Kaplan gave the following account of the event:

The four-man crew was working shortly before 9 a.m. on a machine known as a recombiner located in the basement of the turbine building. The device combines oxygen and hydrogen converting the elements to water for use in the reactor systems.

The turbine building, which is next to the reactors, houses large, cylindrical devices which are spanned by passing steam — the byproduct of water heated by the nuclear reactors — through them to generate electricity.

The recombiner unit the crews were working on is a backup for two other machines which serve the individual reactors. It was taken out of service for maintenance, but had common connections to serve either reactor.

While one of the workers was using a grinding tool to make a cut to replace a part of the recombiner, sparks from the grinding wheel apparently touched off an explosion in what is believed to have been a lingering hydrogen pocket in a 18-inch gooseneck pipe.

There was no fire, but the intensity of the blast in the small area was enough to cause Whitmore's burns and blow the radioactive dust particles onto him. It was unknown whether Whitmore was actually operating the grind tool.

Personnel from the FP&L health-physics department accompanied Whitmore to the hospital, supervised decontamination, and took his clothing and all other contaminated materials in appropriate containers back to the plant for disposal.

Kaplan said plant management will conduct an investigation into the incident and report the findings to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which was notified shortly after the explosion occurred.

Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the NRC, described the incident as rare but said it has happened before at other plants.

The Susquehanna plant is located about five miles north of Berwick in Salem Township, Lancaster County.

For them, 'affluence' poor asset

Would you believe Schuylkill County is the ninth-wealthiest non-metropolitan county in the nation? I am not joking. It really is. Just ask Tom Conroy, a market researcher from Allen Park, Mich., who crunched the numbers for an article in December's American Demographics. Schuylkill County, with total 1989 income of $2.32 billion, ranks right up there with Cape Cod, where the Kennedys live in the summer; York County, Maine, where the Bushes maintain a summer home; Kennebec County, and San Luis Obispo County, which lies along the California coast between Santa Barbara and Monterey.

There is no need to elaborate the obvious. Schuylkill County is a job creator. It is a county with a high percentage of the population in service industries. That ratio is 62 percent above the national norm.

Twenty-one percent of all the wages earned by county residents come from jobs outside the county. Jobs inside the county are concentrated in mining and manufacturing at rates much higher than the national norms, while employment in service industries is much lower than those national norms.

"On the positive side," Conroy says, "the large number of people commuting out of the county to work means a new employer should have no trouble hiring good employees. And," he adds, "the low rate of unemployment in service industries shows the county has needs for services that are not being met, and that translates into business opportunities."

For the ninth-wealthiest non-metropolitan county in the nation, it's a cruel world.

When the Reading School Board decides on a controversial issue, a seat inside the board room becomes a very valuable commodity.

With a legal capacity of only 80 people, it does not take long for the room to become full. At the school board meeting Wednesday night, a security guard was turning people away 15 minutes before the meeting's scheduled start and dozens of people stood outside the room unable to see or hear the proceedings.

The board has heard complaints about this problem before, and Wednesday night it was a popular topic among audience members — both inside and outside the board room.

Many people who saw the meeting were angry for another reason: They did not get a chance to make comments to the board until after it had completed its business, including a legal staff shake-up many in the audience opposed.

Board President James B. Cattagrone said he hopes to alleviate the problem of overcrowding in the board room by conducting some meetings in school auditoriums.

Cattagrone this week plans to propose holding special board meetings the first weeks of March, June, September and December, each in a different middle school so every region of the city would get a chance to participate.

The meetings would be geared toward providing information to the public about district and board activities, Cattagrone said, and ample time would be provided for public comment.

He noted most regular board meetings draw less than capacity crowds.

Vice President Jake Hain said the board would do its best to change the site of a meeting if members expect a large turnout, but he said it often is difficult to find a large room available on short notice.

Director Mark L. Brown said he did not mind changing the location of meetings, as long as the sites chosen offer easy access for the disabled.

The board greeted with mixed reactions the idea of allowing the public to speak before the board makes decisions, though residents complained loudly about their lack of influence Wednesday night.

"If you give people a chance to talk ahead of time, you'll get more taxpayers participating at all the meetings," said William J. Vitale, a member of the city planning commission who attended the meeting Wednesday.

Vitale said his board allows public input throughout its meeting.

Several directors rejected the idea, arguing it would make already long meetings even longer.

"If we permitted comments from the public before the meetings, we'd be here until the next day," said Umberto Tucci, who suggested that residents express their concerns through phone calls and letters to board members.

Brown said he supports allowing the crowd to speak before the board makes its decisions. He argued the meetings will be the same length no matter when the public addresses the board.

Cattagrone said he wants to hear public comments and will give anyone who wants to speak a chance once the board has completed its business.

The board next week is to consider another measure which would help the public see meetings without having to fight crowds at the board room.

Eve J. Kimball is proposing having Berks Community Television broadcast all public meetings. Cattagrone said he supports the idea.

Bill Dimmerling, the Winter Carnival King, falls his royal parade duties Saturday in the Pottsville Winter Carnival.

Keeps parade moving anniversary celebration

By Chester A. Moore

Lightning rained on the parade in Pottsville Saturday during the 25th anniversary celebration.

POTTSVILLE — Mother Nature was kind by keeping snow away from the Greater Pottsville Winter Carnival Association's 25th anniversary parade Saturday.

An estimated 1,500 people lined the sidewalks to watch the procession headed by William Dimmerling, chief marshal.

Dimmerling, known as "Mr. Pottsville," wore the same red velvet cloak and a crown which he wore during the first parade in 1967.

Dimmerling said the cloak kept warm during his first ride.

Swelling the crowd of spectators were 300 Berks County visitors who rode the "Snowflake Express" excursion.

The "Snowflake Express" arrived here at 11:00 a.m. Appropriately, some snowflakes swirled around the station as passengers alighted. Carnival events also included tours of historic places in the Schuylkill County seat.

"The parade was delightful and I believe the visitors enjoyed their stay," Dimmerling said. "While the number of people watching was a less than in former years, everybody appeared to like the event."

Denise Hartenstine of Port Carben was named Queen of the Snows.

Included in the line of march were a variety of bands, including the Pottsville Area High School Band, drum and bugle corps, a string band and several floats.

Many former local residents were in town to view the parade. Seventeen celebrities were occupied by former Carnival Queens.

There was some thought of cancelling this year's parade because of the flu epidemic, but a check with physicians allayed fears of a sickness outbreak.

The parade theme centered the 25th anniversary of the Greater Pottsville Winter Carnival Association.

Wounds in chests fatal to 3

From our news staff

Three city residents who died in a grisly stabbing rampage early Friday morning — described as a "double homicide-suicide" — all succumbed to puncture wounds of the chest. Corner William R. Fators reported Saturday.

Police said A. Noel Pahuamba killed his wife, Teresa Flores, 29, and his mother-in-law, Esperanza Robles, 46, during a bloody attack at 4:15 a.m. in their home at 408 Woodward St.

Police said Pahuamba, 31, apparently ended the killing spree by repeatedly stabbing himself with a butcher knife.

"They all died of one or two stab wounds of the chest even though he (Pahuamba) was stabbed more than 40 times, his wife more than 30 times and his mother-in-law many times," Fators said Saturday after autopsy in Reading Hospital.

Specifically, Fators said Pahuamba died of a single puncture wound of his heart. Flores of two stab wounds that pierced both of her lungs, and Robles of a single stab wound of her aorta.

Fators said no certificates of death will be issued until he confers with city police and District Attorney Mark C. Haldean.

"But the simple fact is that the double homicide-suicide is still the most likely scenario of what happened," he said.

The coroner reiterated that although the autopsy showed Pahuamba suffered several stab wounds to the back that he could not have inflicted himself, authorities are certain that those wounds occurred inside the house, not before he returned home.

"They were not immediately life-threatening," Fators said of the back wounds. "And the only trail of blood we have leaving the house came from the young boy (Pahuamba's 9-year-old son, Noel Jr.) as he ran outside for help."

The youngster, who was cut on the wrist during the rampage, remained in satisfactory condition Saturday night in St. Joseph Hospital.

Also treated there was the couple's 6-year-old daughter, Mrs. Pahuamba, for anxiety, and Pahuamba's sister-in-law, Imelda Flores-Sebastian, 22, for an eye injury.

"This was one of the best crime scenes we've ever processed," Fators added. "The cooperation and communication between my staff and city police has been just outstanding."

Deadline near in case of man linked to Nazis

From our news staff

The fate of a Schuylkill County man accused of hiding his past as a Nazi death camp guard remains uncertain, because attorneys have until Monday to submit additional arguments to a federal judge.

U.S. District Court Judge Franklin S. Van Antwerpen has been asked to dismiss a case seeking to revoke the citizenship of Nikolaus Schiffer of New Ringgold

Officials are uncertain when the judge will rule on the dismissal request.

The request was filed by Schiffer's attorney, William E. Jones, of Abington, Montgomery County. Jones was not available for comment Saturday.

The Office of Special Investigations in September filed a complaint charging that Schiffer served in the Nazis' Waffen-SS Totenkopfsturmbann, or Death's Head Battalion, from 1943 to 1945 after leaving the German-armed Romanian Army.

Schiffer could not be reached for comment Saturday.

The government's complaint also states that Schiffer served as an armed guard at concentration camps in Sachsenhausen and Flossenbürg, Germany, and Majdanek, also known as Lubin, in German-occupied Poland.

He also served briefly at the SS training camp in Gross-Rosen in German-occupied Poland, the complaint alleges.

The government charges that Schiffer renounced U.S. citizenship derived from his birth in Philadelphia when he served in the Romanian army.

The complaint charges that Schiffer did not file for U.S. citizenship after his return to the United States in 1958.
