Request for Review by) Docket Nos. 97-21 and 96-45 Buffalo & Erie County Public Library of) Decision of Universal Service Administrator)

The Buffalo and Erie County Public Library (“B&ECPL”) hereby requests a review of an Administrator’s appeal decision regarding library funding requests made by B&ECPL (Entity No. 124851, Funding Request Numbers: 209823, 209825, 209829, 209833, 209854, 209858, 209860, 209864, 209960, 209962, 209963, 209965, 209968, 209971, 209974, 209976 and 209980).

In a letter dated April 25, 2000, the Universal Service Administrative Company denied in full B&ECPL’s appeal of an earlier Administrator funding decision for the second program year.

History:

In its original Form 471 application (Application Number 137691), B&ECPL requested a discount to “Purchase and install Cisco 2501 router software maintenance for Y2K” for seventeen library outlets; and “Purchase and install Cisco 2501 router Flash memory upgrades (required for Y2K software upgrade)” for 16 library outlets. Pre-discount costs for the 16 libraries receiving both software maintenance and flash upgrades totaled $507.50 each, while one library outlet receiving only the software maintenance had a total pre-discount cost of $247.50. A copy of this Form 471 is attached as Exhibit A.

In a "Funding Commitment Decision Letter" dated November 2, 1999, the Universal Service Administrator (Schools & Libraries Division) denied each funding request as follows: "Funding Commitment Decision: $0.00 – Incl. Svcs./ or product(s) Funding Commitment Decision Explanation: 30% or more of this FRN includes a request for Y2K & Cisco 2500 series routers which is an ineligible product(s) or service(s) based on program rules." A copy of this FCD letter is attached as Exhibit B.

B&ECPL staff reviewed the Eligible Services List posted on the www.universalservice.org web site on November 15, 1999 and found no reference to either routers or Y2K being "ineligible product(s) or service(s)". A copy of this document is attached as Exhibit C.

Based upon this review, in a timely letter dated November 18, 1999, B&ECPL filed an appeal to the Schools and Libraries Division, which was delivered by Federal Express on November 19, 1999. The basis of the appeal centered on the performance-based need for the memory upgrades and router maintenance as well as that, according to program rules published at that time, routers were indeed an eligible product. Hence, memory upgrades and router operating software were also eligible. A copy of the November 18, 1999 appeal letter is attached as Exhibit D.

In a letter dated April 25, 2000, the Universal Service Administrative Company denied in full B&ECPL's appeal as follows: "Decision on Appeal: Denied in full. Denial Reason(s): - Based on the documentation submitted by the applicant, the services requested are for the maintenance and memory upgrades of Cisco 2500 Series routers, which are remote access routers. Since remote access routers are ineligible products per program rules, maintenance and memory upgrades associated with these routers are also ineligible.” A copy of this letter is attached as Exhibit E.

The April 25, 2000 letter is the first time we were informed that the reason for denial involved “remote access routers”. There is no mention of “remote access routers” in the eligible services list (Exhibit C) at the time B&ECPL filed its appeal. A new section titled “Remote Access Router” does appear in the “Schools and Libraries Eligibility List” maintained on the www.universalservice.org web site as “1999 Final Approved Document” dated December 2, 1999. A copy of pages 1 and 24 of this 36-page document is attached as Exhibit F. As an aside, page one of this document states that “Items in Bold indicate an addition or modification of a product or service.” However, the new “Remote Access Router” section is not so bolded.

A “Remote Access Router” is defined in this new section as: “A router on a LAN with a digital data service unit/channel service unit (DSU/CSU) built in for dial up or remote access of a network.” It is classified as not eligible citing paragraphs 459 and 460 from FCC97-157 and FCC 97-420.

The Cisco 2501 routers purchased by B&ECPL DO NOT contain a built in DSU/CSU. Each 2501 router is a single LAN router configured with the most basic operating system feature set, IP only. According to information found at the Cisco web site, <http://www.cisco.com> , there are over 25 different models in the 2500 series. The model 2501 is clearly identified as a "Single LAN router" in this documentation. A copy of relevant pages from this web site are attached as Exhibit G.

Each of B&ECPL's library outlets is connected to the Central Library and the Internet utilizing a separate DSU/CSU unit that connects to a frame relay line "leased" from Bell Atlantic, DBA New York Telephone, an eligible telecommunications service provider providing B&ECPL an eligible telecommunications service under the provisions of the Universal Service program rules. A copy of our most recent telephone bill for frame relay services to all of our outlets is attached as Exhibit H. Further, the routers' configuration and equipment does not allow for dial-up access to the library outlets. The 2501 routers as purchased, installed and used by B&ECPL, do not and can not perform remote access functions.

Discussion:

The question before the Commission in this appeal is: Should the Universal Service Administrator be allowed to deny funding for services involving a router simply because some models of the router series in question are capable of providing remote access, even when the individual model purchased and its use by the library is solely for eligible services?

The key points in this case are as follows:

1. While the Cisco 2500 router series contains models that can function as remote access routers, the model 2501 purchased by B&ECPL does not contain a DSU/CSU and does not function as a remote access router. Further, the “IP only” operating software purchased with the unit does not support remote access.

2. B&ECPL uses the router as a “Single LAN router” routing traffic only amongst equipment located within the individual library in which it is located.
3. A physically separate DSU/CSU unit, located in each library outlet, provides the interface between each library outlet’s LAN, B&ECPL’s Central Library and the Internet using frame relay lines “leased” from Bell Atlantic, DBA New York Telephone, an eligible telecommunications service provider, providing B&ECPL an eligible telecommunications service under the provisions of the Universal Service program rules.
4. The Universal Service Administrative Company’s denial of funding based upon the potential capabilities of a router family of products rather than the capabilities, configuration, and use of the specific router purchased, would result in the arbitrary disqualification of numerous products and therefore numerous school and library funding requests that, in actuality, are providing eligible services to eligible, and in many cases, very needy applicants. In B&ECPL’s case, this includes seven libraries serving the City of Buffalo (85% discount as poverty levels are high), two in the 50% discount band, and eight in the 40-48% band.

Statement of relief sought:

In this specific case, and for E-rate purposes, we ask that the Commission find that: the Cisco 2501 router as purchased and used by B&ECPL constitutes an eligible product/service; that the router memory upgrades and maintenance requested are therefore also eligible; that the actual configuration and use of routers be the primary factors in determining eligibility rather than the potential capabilities of the router family in general; that the Universal Service Administrator's denial of funding for all the FRNS listed above be reversed; and that funding be approved as requested by B&ECPL.

Respectfully submitted,

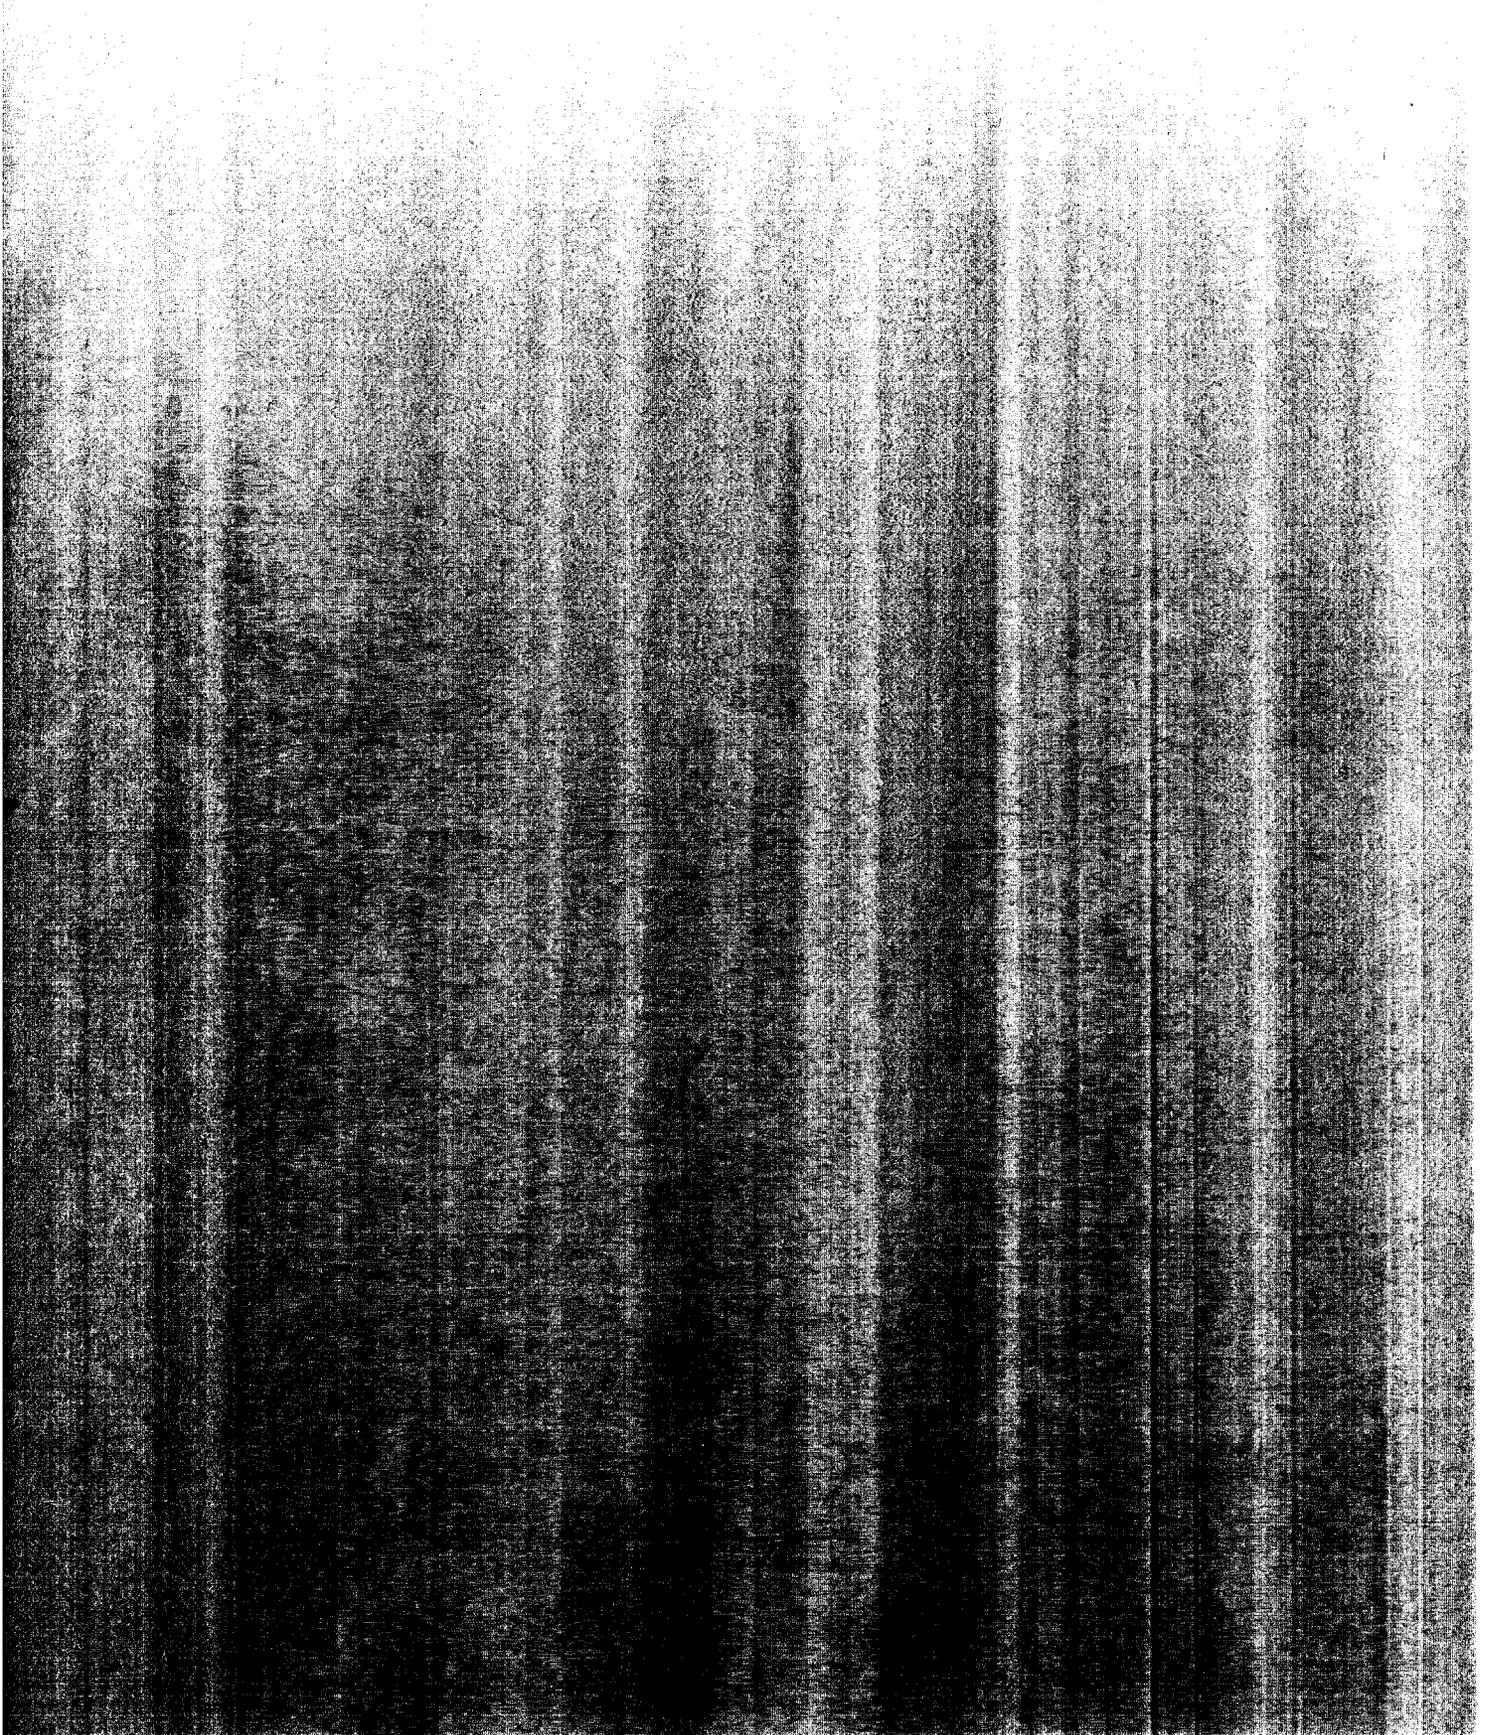

By:
